

GEN. PRICE GREETED GOVERNOR AT CAMP

Death of Grandson Forces Commander to Cut Exercises Short

TALKS OF FUTURE WARS

Camp Duffy, Mt. Gretna, Pa., Aug. 2.—Major General Price, Jr., after receiving the news of the death of his grandson, Henry A. Price, in France, delayed his departure only long enough to greet the State Executive upon his arrival.

During the absence of General Price, Brigadier General E. C. Shannon, of the Fifty-sixth Infantry Brigade, will be in command of the camp. General Price stated that he expected to be back at his post after Saturday of Sunday.

In the Governor's party were Mrs. Spruell, Harry A. Mankie, Adjutant General Frank E. Price, and Colonel Fred Anderson. They made the first stop at the cavalry bivouac near Colebrook, where, after an informal inspection and greetings to the staff, they motored through the division headquarters for lunch.

The Governor's expression was one of pleasure and he admitted that it was partly due to the fact that he had been received with such cordiality and no troops had been turned out to pass in review before him, with the resulting interruption in the training schedule.

For Business, Not Pleasure. "I am glad there is no review," he told newspapermen, "for we are here on business and not on pleasure."

This afternoon the Governor and party made a tour of the camp, returning later to Harrisburg by bus. The only military exercises which were held in France unless reparations were soon forthcoming from Germany, marked the task of a stirring address last night by General Price.

Frankly and with impressive frankness the general told the troops of his command of conditions as he found them today in France and in Germany, pointing in high degree the nation which many times had suffered the onslaught of the Hun from the North and Central Europe, and the failure of the Central Powers to make an effort to make reparations for the destruction they wrought.

He voiced a hope that even a world war would bring about a union of France, England and America, which would be a road to a peaceful and happy world, which he believed to be the certain terms.

"There will be many of you here tonight who will go on to make their pay," declared the general. "If there is any war, you men will be there. Don't be deluded into thinking that there will be no more wars. There has been predicted since the time of Christ, but we have had it regularly, just the same."

Make Germany Pay. "There are charges that France is a military nation. Don't think when you hear them, for they are not true," France has not been given the help France deserves.

"Nine billion francs have been spent on reconstruction and France hasn't any more," Germany has not paid one cent. "An order to pay the balance of the bill was sent to the German government and they refused to pay it. They are making no effort to pay France, but the Red Cross is doing it for them. With them and their armaments, they have murdered 27,000,000 men."

"I hope something will happen, if it will not be the League of Nations, that will cause a hand between France, England and ourselves in case Germany attacks again."

Announcement of the postponed movement of troops was made by Brigadier General Price, who stated that the first two weeks of the summer camp starting Friday at 7 o'clock P. M., and continuing through the night until morning.

ROMANCE OF HEIRESS WHO WED POOR ARTIST IS ENDED

Montague Flagg Hesitated Nine Years Ago About Marrying Girl With Millions. Now She Gets Paris Divorce

New York, Aug. 2.—Just before Miss Thyrza Benson married Montague Flagg nine years ago, his discovery that she possessed millions of her own and was heiress to one of the wealthiest families in the country, nearly ended their engagement. Yesterday the romance of the poor young architect and the wealthy young art lover ended. Cable advice from Paris reported that Mrs. Flagg had received a divorce there.

In 1913 Flagg, a cousin of James Montgomery Flagg, artist, met Miss Benson at a house party. As the daughter of the late Charles H. Benson, and the granddaughter of Robert Hoe of printing press fame, the girl had found her money was something of a handicap as far as desirable young men were concerned.

But money talked, and Flagg heard her and recognized the voice. It seemed to him, and as he listened, the Hoe-Benson fortune seemed to tell him that the girl was worth more than better leaves alone.

Flagg went at once to tell Miss Benson of what the voice was saying. He set out to explain that wealth and poverty should not marry, but then another voice began to talk, so a couple of weeks later there was quite an elaborate wedding in Grace Church, Brooklyn, in Montague Flagg and Thyrza Benson were the principals.

But the voice just wouldn't keep quiet. It was still whispering in the background and the newlyweds answered it by announcing plans for their future home. It was to be just such another simple cottage as that in which they had met. It was to be so unpretentious that the casual observer could think there had never been even a Russian noble class close enough to reach it by telephone.

So the picture faded out of the public prints. The money, the quiet little retreat in the country and even the Flagg themselves were heard of no more.

But when money ceases to talk it begins to yell. It took Mrs. Flagg to Paris; it retained A. Hanigan, attorney; it paid the costs incidental to bringing a divorce suit in the Eighth Chamber of the Seine Civil Court.

And now the whole story is condensed in a four-line cable from France.

Three Whitmans, Held on Fraud Charge in New York, Say Attorney Is to Blame

NAME STOCKHOLDERS HERE

New York, Aug. 2.—Vincent I. Whitman, who appears again today in the West Side Court with his father, Irvin A. Whitman, and brother, Bernard Whitman, in connection with the extradition proceedings to return the three to Philadelphia on charges brought by Lincoln L. Eyre, declared this morning that they were in a "fight to a finish" with their former legal counsel.

The inventor of the machine for the animation of cartoons in moving pictures roundly denounced Eyre, who endeavored to have bail for the three men fixed at $15,000. It was cut down to $1000 each, by sanction of District Attorney Hanton.

"When last we saw Eyre," said Mr. Whitman, "he was apparently on the friendly terms with us. We had employed him to incorporate our company, and he really did little harm. He did most of the work, it developed through the Corporation Security Company, Pennsylvania Building, Philadelphia, and really did little harm. He did most of the work, it developed through the Corporation Security Company, Pennsylvania Building, Philadelphia, and really did little harm."

Finally liberated from Ellis Island after an uncle in Youngstown, O., had certified that his niece would not become a public charge, Miss Stapleton showed the little locket on a chain around her neck which carries the picture of her missing parent.

"All efforts to trace him abroad have failed," she said. "But before I abandon hope and regard my father as only a memory, I want to search America. Miss Stapleton left two brothers and a sister with her mother in England when she started on her quest."

Mayor Signs City Contract

An ordinance appropriating $550,000 for the creation of a refuse destructor was signed today by Mayor Moore. It will be located at G and Ramona streets. The ordinance was one of the last passed by Council before it adjourned for the summer.

Washington, Aug. 2.—Announcing the completion of machinery for the distribution of coal in the strike emergency, Henry B. Spencer, Federal Fuel Administrator, last night outlined the plan of each cog in the monster mechanism.

Particular stress was laid on the functions of the fuel committees set up in each State. The Federal Fuel Administrator will be sent to Mr. Spencer and thence to the district committees in the principal producing coal fields.

The State organizations were asked to report at once on the consumption of coal in their State for utilities, household and industrial use. Those reports will include a list of a hundred names of the coal users, the character of the consumer, character of coal required, weekly supply needed by such consumer and number of weeks' stock he now has on hand.

As a means of expediting shipments, Mr. Spencer said a single consignee will be held up in each State to receive all coal shipped in orders from the Government. The consignee will be responsible for payment. The Government's Committee will then distribute coal according to the needs of the State, giving priority in the order named: (1) Government; (2) military and naval; (3) households, industries, manufacturing public necessities and industries in general.
